

Leadership & Excellence

Information Brochure for those who have already done the Self-Assessment and European Accredited Assessor Courses.

Quality Scotland is pleased to announce a joint venture with Edinburgh Napier University Business School which will enable those who have undertaken both the 2-day Self-Assessment and the 3-day Accredited Assessor Quality Scotland courses to combine those with other business modules of leadership and Practitioner Learning: Organisational Practice to create a masters programme pathway leading to the potential for an overall masters degree.

Positive Leadership

Positive Leadership will help participants use positive psychology, emotional and social intelligence in considering team and personal development with a significant proportion of the module focussing on the use of authentic and solution-focused leadership. Participants will look at how organisations can connect performance and emotions to develop feelings of security, inner strength, self-confidence and self-esteem. They will learn how to get more satisfied, productive, and engaged employees by concentrating on people's strengths rather than their weaknesses.

The module will encourage participants to focus on the identification of the factors that make a positive difference to their own and other's subjective experience of happiness and satisfaction with life which result in better health, energy, and longevity and coping abilities. Positive Leadership will also examine the connection between performance and emotions based on the idea that organisations are likely to create and obtain a greater impact by fostering positive emotion rather than simply dealing with problems, developing in turn feelings of security, inner strength, self-confidence and self-esteem.

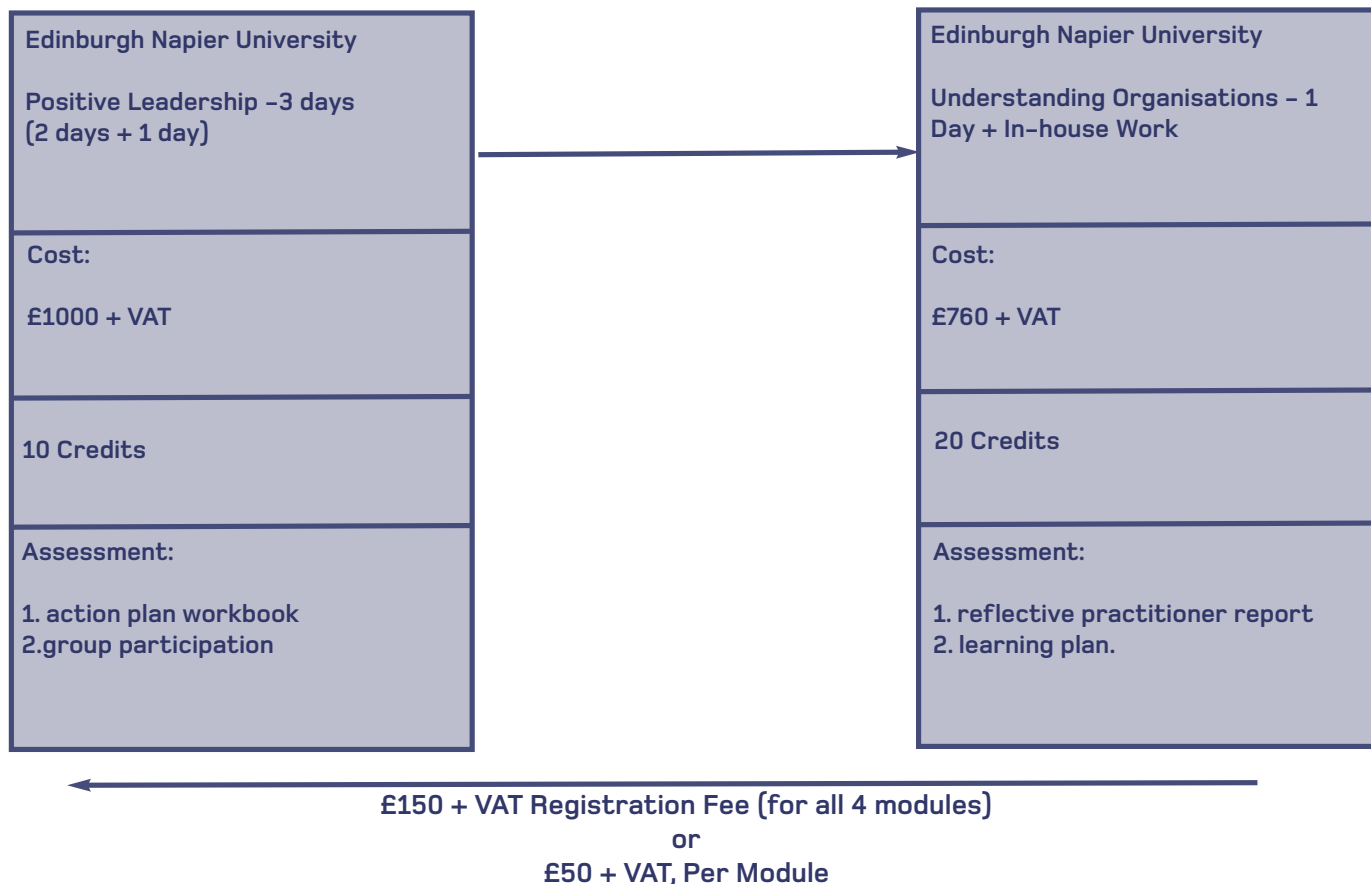

Practitioner Learning: Organisational Practices

In this module participants will draw on relevant content and knowledge gained from both personal work experience and from previous modules. This will enable participants to apply theory into a practical context through a process of critical analysis and reflection in a work setting that will permit the consideration and analysis of the external and internal influences on the implementation of change.

Programme Cost

The Leadership & Excellence Programme consists of 4 Modules from Quality Scotland and Edinburgh Napier University. If you've already done the Self-Assessment and Accredited Assessor courses you can get the credits at Masters level to contribute to this Post-graduate certificate by undertaking a joint assignment for the two modules which will consist of a piece of written work of 4,500 words and a presentation. The charge for this will be £175 to cover our administrative and tutor costs. Please note that there will be an induction at the start of the programme.
